GOLD IN METEORITES AND IN THE EARTH'S CRUST By ROBERTS. }ONES ABSTRACT The reported gold contents of meteorites range from 0.0003 to 8.74 parts per million. Gold is siderophilic, and the greatest amounts in meteorites are in the iron phases. Estimates of the gold content of the earth's crust are in the range ~f 0.001 to 0.006 parts per million.

the meteorite samples have been exposed to the terrestrial environment (Antarctic) for typically thousands of years before collection and hence the meteorites may host their own microbiological record. Consequently, we need to understand what is in the Meteorite Lab to establish a baseline for any future microbial studies of Antarctic meteorites.

Meteorite flux is the total mass of extraterrestrial objects that strike the Earth. This is currently about 107 to 109 kg/year. Much of this material is dust-sized objects called micrometeorites. The frequency at which meteorites of different sizes strike the Earth depends on the size of the
