How many Black students and schools suffer racial penalties for being “the wrong kind of different.” Antonia Randolph raises a gamut of issues that sorely need to be confronted. I commend her for having the insight and courage to bring these unsettling truths to light, based as they are on assiduous research.

The wrong type of fonts in PDF This is far the commonest problem: the symptom is that text in the document looks “fuzzy”. Most people use Adobe Acrobat Reader to view their PDF: Reader is distributed free of charge, and is widely available, for all its faults. One of those faults is its failure to deal with bitmap fonts (at least, in all versions earlier than version 6, all of which copies are pretty old, now! but some are occasionally found).
